

Getting an Injection

Sometimes, even if I am not feeling sick, I go to the doctor to have a check-up and make sure I am okay.

To stop me getting sick, the doctor may give me an injection. These are given to everyone.

I will sit down on a chair or bed and try to stay very still.

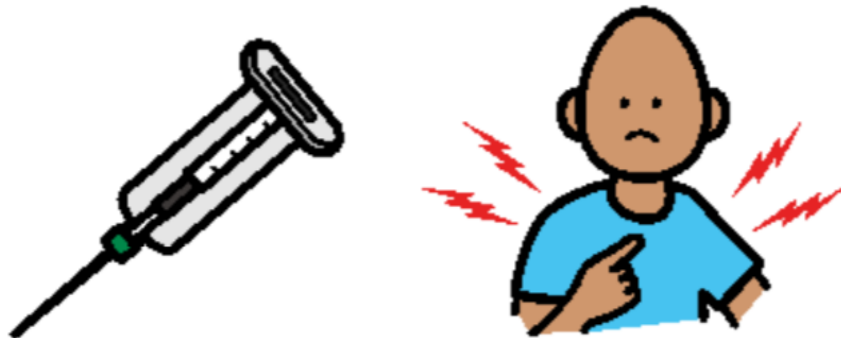

Mum and Dad will be there the whole time and can try to help me.

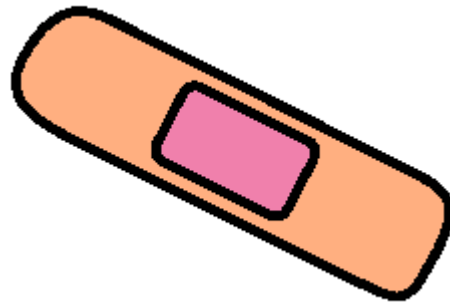

The doctor will clean my arm with a cold wipe.

The doctor will put the injection needle into my arm. This feels like a sharp scratch.

The doctor will remove the needle after a few seconds and place a bandaid on my arm. The sharp scratch will go away.

Everyone will be proud of me for being brave and getting an injection.
